The general function of our website therefore requires certain specific cookies. Examples of specific uses are among other things to support several simultaneous visitors to the website and identify each one so that the visit experience becomes unique and customized. They are also used to make the shopping cart and checkout function flawless, smart and to act quickly.

In addition to these necessary cookies, the remaining cookies are used in specific situations such as gathering information about the number of visitors to the websites and to obtain information about how our website pages are used and how we can improve them. This information enables us to develop and optimize our website. Finally, cookies are used by us for marketing purposes. As mentioned above, you can either approve or reject these remaining cookies in our cookie note - for more information on the note, read the section "Cookie note".

Information we receive through cookies

The information we collect through cookies is technical data and technical information. What this means is we explain more thoroughly in our privacy policy under the section "Concepts used in the policy".

Tools that is used

Google Analytics

Google Analytics is an analysis tool where we can gain insight into how our site is used through statistics that have been generated based on the information in the cookies we use for the purpose.

The information mentioned above under the section "The information we obtain through cookies" is passed on to and stored by Google Inc. on servers in the United States. Google may transfer this information to third parties if required by law or in the event that a third party processes the information on Google's behalf and instructions. Google manages the information at an aggregated level using unidentified or pseudonymized data, without any connection to you as an individual, and used for statistics. Google Analytics does this by, for example, truncating (deleting) the last digits of a specific IP address before storing the data with Google. We have set up Google Analytics, which means that the information is only uploaded against Google Analytics when approval is given in our cookie note.

Social network

Our website contains embedded content from social networks, such as Facebook, Instagram, Youtube and Mailchimp. These providers may therefore use cookies on our website to see how our visitors interact with the embedded content (s) on our website. We do not have access to, and cannot control over, these cookies or the information they collect. You should check the policies of the relevant third parties for further information about these cookies and how to opt out of receiving them.

I don't want to have cookies!

All browsers are different, but most (with the latest update) have the default setting to allow cookies to be stored.

Manage cookie settings

Before we take the step in explaining how to get rid of cookies, there are two features that may be more appropriate, namely to get a warning from your browser each time you visit a website that uses cookies or to reject or manage specific cookies.

Most websites have more or less the same approach to managing cookie settings. With that said, you will probably get use of the instructions below. If this is not the case, contact us and we will help you.

1. Start by looking up a menu called, in the style of, "Tools" or "Settings".
2. Then look further for a menu called, in the style of, "Integrity / Privacy / Security" or a corresponding icon that can be interpreted according to the concepts. If you find this menu, you can skip the third step.
3. Didn't find the menu? Look for a menu that should be called something like "Alternative" instead, and then look for the "Privacy section". Then look for "Content" or "Cookie settings".
4. In this menu you can now select and change how cookies should work or be placed on your browser or device. For detailed cookie settings, there should be an advanced tab where you are.
5. After selecting your desired settings, save and close the current window. Restart the browser and the changes have been applied.

Remove already downloaded and existing cookies from the browser

Follow step 1, 2 and 3 above under "Manage cookie settings".

1. The next step is to look up "Delete cookies and website data / browsing history" or something similar.
2. You should now be able to remove all or specific cookies according to your wishes, using the instructions above. You may also want to delete your web history, download history, and clear your browser's cache. You can do it anywhere in the same place where you are.
3. Once you have erased everything unwanted, save and close the current window. Restart your browser and the unwanted items have been removed.

If you choose to disable cookies, you may miss several benefits on our site. Included, for example, is our web shop that does not work without some necessary cookies. The website will probably not perform as well in its entirety as you expect.
